

link-sending note

Converted from pasted text for brain.aolabs.io.

i just need to know for myself that i can send you a link, that's it. i sent you the two links. that's it. they didn't even have thumbnails. it's not even at that point. it's just that i want to feel comfortable being able to send something to you. it's the act of sending something to you and being comfortable with that. i want to be able to give you something, text messages, sentences, words, and feel comfortable with that. i just want to be able to fucking send you stuff and then shit doesn't fucking explode. i'm not trying to provoke you. i feel like i don't need to understand the exact reason. i'm supposed to explain to you that i have never sent anything like this to any of my girlfriends before. i don't know what's going to happen when people tell me no. i don't know the reason why. i don't know the consequences of anything because i've never done it before. now i've done it, and i probably won't do it again because it seems like it will result in a conflict. that's it. that's fucking simple. i think relationships are fucking learning all the time. that's not an experiment. this is fucking life. maybe i just need to see the rule and see for myself what happens. i say it like an experiment, but i think this is what everyone does. people do shit and then bad things happen, but i'm just fucking self-aware about it.

people always do things. people do whatever they want, and then they're like, oh shit, wow, now they argue. but i'm someone who realizes, okay, i explain what happened. my confusion is, why are you comfortable with me talking about my previous ex stuff, and then when it comes to a link that you don't even have to open and you don't even see the thumbnail, suddenly you're like, no, don't send it. that makes me very confused. so at that point i abandon logic, and i don't even know what's happening. the only fucking thing i can understand for myself is what will happen if i send it. i don't even know why exactly. i think the way you act is very confusing to me, so i don't even know what's right or wrong. so i just do the first thing i thought was right. that's the only thing i have that's grounding. i talked to you for like a fucking hour. i showed you a lot of stuff related to my ex. you didn't end the call. you didn't do anything. you were okay with it. and then suddenly you're like, okay, i don't want you to send these two links that don't even have thumbnails and that i told you that you don't have to open. that's my confusion. i'm like, what the fuck? i'm very confused. i don't know what happens. i don't know what to trust anymore. it's not an experiment. i just totally lost trust in what i'm supposed to do. i have no idea if what you're saying is right or wrong, so i just do the first thing that i thought was right. that's it. it's something that makes sense to me, and then i start just doing whatever i thought was the right thing to do. i was like, are you okay with this? yes. are you okay with this? yes. are you okay with this? yes. and then with all of it combined, suddenly no, or just one tiny new thing, no. i'm like, what? it doesn't make sense. maybe you just have a weird thing where you don't like to be sent links of youtube videos. that's honestly my best understanding. links that you don't have to open. that makes me very confused. maybe we talk about something like ice cream and how we had it throughout our life, and then the thought comes by, like, oh, this is what i had when i was at this place two years ago with someone. if we're talking about previous experiences, that's what's going on in my mind. i'm like, what the fuck, i can't talk about my life? because the life i have has girls in it. there's a lot of fucking shit to learn from those videos. you can learn how fucking toxic they were. you don't have to watch nine hours of me and my ex hanging around. i didn't force you to. i'm just like, here's the data if you ever want to view it.

if you sent me videos of your previous ex, i would fucking go through every single second and analyze the shit out of who you were dating in the past, just for my own fucking benefit. i would be like, okay, this guy, i kind of want to learn about you, your taste, right? i just see everything related to exes as history. it's history to be learned, even if it has a video format. even if i'm just telling you details about them, literally anything related to an ex is just fucking data, history. it's not that there's no emotion to it. i'm not a fucking robot. it was stressful. those times with the ex were not a good time. that's why i'm not dating them anymore. a lot of the things i explained to you, all the details, i don't know. i feel like if i were in your place, i would want to fucking learn about what kind of shit my partner went through. i would be like, okay, send me videos about your ex, let's see, i kind of want to know what's about it. you're listening to me talk about all the shit that happened, which is basically the stuff that happened in the video, almost exactly. the content is the same. i'm describing it the same way. maybe video is overwhelming to you. maybe you don't like videos, even though i'm explaining the videos when i tell you, oh, this is what i did here, this is what i got from this place, blah blah blah.

i'm talking about stuff that happened in the video. maybe you get triggered when you see them, even if i describe them in a way that exactly describes them. it's like you actually see it now, not just my words anymore. it becomes real. i feel like there are a lot of contradictions. i am happy to explain to you the horrible shit that happened in my past and what led to the person i am today, and a lot of that is in the video also. you don't even have to watch the video. i'm just putting it there. it's like when you read a paper or a book, there's some part at the end that's just random information, like here's the summary, and this is where the summary came from. i think my conclusion is that video is too overwhelming for you, and i am okay with understanding that. even if i describe the video to you, you're like, okay, alan is learning so much, alan's past is so shitty, and i'm happy that he's dating someone who is less toxic. i'm basically explaining all of that to you, and i'm like, wow, i'm saying everything, i might as well send you the video, because the video is just what i'm saying. so when i hear resistance about it, i'm like, why? how come she's okay with me describing it in extreme detail, but she's not okay with seeing the video i was explaining?

it's like i showed you a picture, i have a picture right here in my hand, and i say this picture looks like this, the sun is this or this, blah blah blah, and then if i send you the picture of the sun, you're like, oh my god, no. those are two different reactions, and that confuses me a lot. maybe you don't know that i was explaining literally everything that basically happened in the video, including the shot glass and all that. i don't record things that are secret like that. i'm very transparent. i try to explain everything. pretty much everything i record in the video is the same thing as the things i say. the video is not sex all the time. if that video were sex all the time, then i would probably be explaining sex all the time. i'm trying to give you background of who i am so that you can learn about me, or if you hate me, you can fuck off or something. i want to give you the full picture of who i am. i think most people are not like me. most people keep videos and talking separate. people talk casually, and then videos are like, oh my god, rated r or kinky. there's a separation. that's not me. i record the things i'm okay with publicly posting, and i also explain the things i'm okay with making public. what i say is the verbal version of what would be in the videos.

i think one thing is, you weren't expecting that, and another thing is, most people are not like me, who videotapes everything. i learned that's the best thing for me to do, because it's important for me to do whatever the fuck i want to do, and i know that sounds really wrong. i think me saying that makes you think i'm a fucking baby, and you don't want to be my mom. when i said i was a baby, i was just kidding, and then you were like, i don't want to be your mom, and if that's the basis that makes you think we're not compatible, then that's shitty, because that is not the point. when you say we're not compatible and you give me these reasons, i feel like those reasons are not even true. maybe that's what you understand, but that's not what's going on. i feel like there's such a huge misunderstanding. my mentality is that if we have a misunderstanding, we probably have to explain each other. but for you, it seems like i say one thing, you take that literally as fact, and then you say we're not compatible. you draw a conclusion so quickly. honestly, i really want to tell you everything, but my memory is literally so bad. my mentality is also like, okay, i don't remember what happened, but if i could remember what happened then i could tell her. i don't remember, so i have this video footage.

honestly, if i remembered everything that happened in this video, i would explain it in full detail to paint the picture of this horrible three weeks i went through. but i can't. i don't have that memory. i wish i did so that i could tell you all of it. every single experience i went through formed my dating preference and my idea of what i want in a relationship. even if it seems small to other people, i think it is a story that is compelling. all these things happened, and now i am the person i am today, wanting to date this person with this goal and this mentality. everything that happened, who i dated, where i went, what jobs i went through, all of that contributes. even if i don't know how it contributes, putting the facts out there is useful. we don't know what the shape of this puzzle is, but we have the puzzle pieces. maybe one day we can understand. here's what happened. that's the best way to understand life, figuring out what happened and what it means, even if we don't know what it means immediately. i'm never like, okay, we should not say this, this should not ever be discussed, because why? anything could be a learning opportunity if you choose to spend the time to understand it more.

maybe you don't have to understand it more, but it's good to know that there is stuff to understand, just for becoming a better human. i feel like i have never explained myself this clearly before. this is the most clear i've ever explained myself to another woman. i feel very happy for myself. before i would be too stressed to put words together, but after fucking shitting on chatgpt 24 hours a day, i learned how to be direct with my words. i don't know. the last time i explained myself, the person i was talking to fucking yeeted away and decided not to talk to me anymore because they realized my mentality is too bold and confident. i know how to improve myself, and that scared her. i feel like people have told me i will be very successful because i know what i want and i do what i want and i understand the consequences, and i try to learn from anything. i should probably continue to be very direct and not afraid to explore things and do things and say things. emotion is just dumb shit your brain makes because of prehistoric fucking shit. the nervous system is stupid. you could do so much in life if you just fucking do it and get used to the fact that if you do it, you will not die, your brain will not be eaten by a tiger.

i feel like i will become like, you know what, i want to get a car, i'm going to get a nice job, i'm going to get a lot of money, i'm going to get a nice house. i feel like this is the part where you tell me if you want to break up with me. i hope you don't because i want to date you. i love you. i try to be direct and accurately explain everything in my brain. i'm trying to be a fucking open book just for you. i don't do this to everyone. i'm not saying you owe me for something. some guys keep secrets, and that sucks, because what if they're cheating on you? i don't want any thought that my girlfriend thinks i'm doing anything sus. i'm just a weird guy with weird thoughts. once in a while i'll do some weird shit, but i'm just a human trying to improve, trying to date, trying to be happy. i'm so excited to see what this transcription is about, like if gpt is going to be like, bro, you're fucking crazy, alan, what are you saying? such weird shit to your girlfriend. i don't care. i love my girlfriend. i'm happy that she'll visit me. i want to hug my girlfriend and kiss her. if you think i'm just going to use you for your body, then i don't think we should have sex at all. that's the best move.

in case you're sleeping and didn't hear anything i said, i listed the reason why i transcribe, because if you fall asleep while i'm talking, then i'll send the summary in chat. at this point i am yapping. that's good. i know i'm comfortable with you if i'm yapping. you could think i'm crazy and too much, and maybe all that yapping made things worse if you didn't like it. but the fact that you're still in a call with me feels like a sign that things are positive, because i said something and you didn't hang up. but i also have flashbacks. last time i was talking to another person, i was explaining why i post stuff and my mentality on things, and i was happy i could say these things and she would still be around, and then she said, "well, about that," and basically said she probably wouldn't be around. so there's one part where i'm like, okay, you're in a call with me and listening, that's good, but another part is scared that you're getting ready to say, "hey alan, everything you said, all that direct mentality and stuff about wanting a car and a house, that was super weird, and since you said all that i don't think we should be together." then i'll be like, oh my god, i guess that was oversharing. but i feel like i want to be comfortable telling you things, so that's what i'm doing.

i'm telling you everything i can think of, whatever my brain is thinking, putting it into words without filtering myself. it's like when a puppy comes up to you and shows its belly and tries to be vulnerable, like, oh my god, i'm safe, i won't destroy, i won't bite you. that's me right now. i'm showing you my mental belly. most of the things i say are probably dumb shit, but i'm trying to say the first thing that pops into my brain, and my brain is going 100 miles an hour. i'm so excited to see what this transcription becomes. i'm also trying to understand and explain what i think about your point of view. i was like, maybe your point of view is this, this, and this, and you didn't say anything. i'm not trying to only explain myself. i'm trying to see what you feel. i spent like five minutes talking about that, and i think you forgot. you already explained why. why do you have to repeat yourself? you told me things, and i'm telling you what i understood from it, and then if my understanding is correct, okay, then we try again. what was wrong about it? do you even remember what i said? i don't even remember what i fucking said. i'm going to ask you questions then. why are you okay if i tell you how my previous ex relationship was and what i learned from it? why are you okay with that?

if i ever mention anything i did in the past, most of my life after my twenties has to do with some girl. even if i explain something like, oh yeah, i did this because of how much influence the person i'm dating has on my overall life, am i supposed to just not say that? when i see to myself that this is something i did and learned from this person, maybe i shouldn't say this one person, i should just say i learned somehow. i want you to make it more clear for me. i want to tell you things. i think every single boyfriend does not give a shit about history and personal growth like i do. i care about that a lot. so should i just not talk about how i grew? should i not talk about my preferences in dating right now and how they came to be because my previous history in dating has to do with my current history in dating? i am trying to understand, that's why i'm asking questions. is that right or wrong? you don't want to see those videos, and you don't have to. you clicked on the links. i'm trying to remember what was in my mind. because i don't understand why the video triggered you. if you make it more clear and less confusing, i think that's a form of respect too. so no pictures, no videos. i can explain it, but no pictures, no videos. at this point, i respect you by wanting to share with you.

i respect you by wanting to explain my life. is it because you're insecure or jealous? i don't get it, because there's one huge fact: if you sent videos to me, i would love it. if you sent me a video of your ex, if you sent anything related to your ex, i would be like, oh, this is interesting, i'll watch it, i want to know about it. when it comes to pictures and videos, that's where you draw the line. so that's the thing. that's true, that's the boundary. the video does not have us fucking. i did not film any sex. it's not about my ex, it's about me. why not learn about me from that? because it's basically what i'm telling you. i'm calling you and telling you all these details, but i don't remember all the details. the video has more details, and i wish that maybe one day i'll watch the videos and study it and then tell you it, and i feel like you would be okay with it. i know my life is more than those videos, but there are details in those videos i don't remember. i don't record everything, but if i could, i would record everything and tell you everything. it's not a presentation, but it's my life. you don't want to learn about me, then i'll just keep everything private and i won't tell you anything about my thoughts anymore. fuck. you want to learn about how i think, how i talk. i want you to hear me yap.

okay, i'll just not send you any pictures or videos about my ex anymore. there. i'm asking you, is that the boundary? are you okay with drawing the line there? don't just say, "you can do whatever you want," because that does not help at all. i think this is the reason why most men are quiet. they don't say anything. i'm literally trying to figure this out, and i'm like, okay, are you drawing a line? i will not send any pictures or videos, and then the response i get is ambiguous and confusing and stressful. you say, "just send whatever you want." obviously if i send whatever i want, this shit happens. i think it's not even what i send. it's just that you decided you don't want me to send this. it could be literally anything. imagine i started talking about my food for the day, like i decided to eat this bowl of pasta, and then one day you decide to say, "i don't want you to send me pictures of your food. don't tell me about your food. don't send me about your food at all." then if i send you a picture of pasta, you won't want to call me for a day or some shit. maybe pasta is a dumb example because it makes it sound disrespectful, but if you decide to draw the line at that moment for whatever reason, and i do it anyway, then this shit happens.

even if i don't understand your exact reason, and i don't think you even understand your exact reason, it seems like you don't understand your own mentality. honestly, you're explaining to me in a way where your only explanation is vague, like, "you don't respect me," or "you're too logical." i can't do anything with that information. it feels like bullshit information. okay, thanks. you drew the line, so i will be quiet. i will not understand why. i'll just be quiet.